

Assistant Professor in Communication Sciences and Disorders

Position: The Pennsylvania State University seeks applicants for a tenure-track Assistant Professor of Communication Sciences and Disorders beginning Fall 2008. Full-time (9-month) appointment. Required: Ph.D., previous teaching experience, active research and scholarship program; postdoctoral experience and CCC-SLP preferred.

Description: Research in specialty area(s) in neuroscience, neurogenetics, neuromotor disorder in children, youth and families and communication disorders that will strengthen the links between research and practice currently targeted by the Department and interdisciplinary initiatives of Penn State's Children, Youth and Families Consortium (CYFC); teach undergraduate and graduate courses in specialty area; supervise undergraduate and graduate students; provide service to the department, college, and university; and contribute to clinical aspects of the program

Closing Date: Reviewed immediately until the position is filled

How to Apply:

Send letter of application curriculum vitae, official transcripts, recent submissions/publications, and three letters of reference to:

Kathryn D.R. Drager, Ph.D.
Associate Professor, Professor-in-Charge of the Graduate Program
Communication Sciences and Disorders
The Pennsylvania State University
308 Ford Building
University Park, PA 16802